ART AROUND TOWN

• House of AUM will open its Studio BrightLight to the public on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 27 and 28, 10 a.m.–3 p.m. The exhibition will feature local artists Ardis Macaulay and Claire Reynolds.

• The art of Kraig King is currently on display at YS Brewery through Dec. 20. King, who is based in Los Angeles, Calif., was born in Springfield and, according to a press release, "has been an artist since his first memory of drawing on a bathroom wall as a 5-year-old child." King has held numerous professional positions — fabric designer, art instructor and HIV research specialist — but always knew he would come back to his love of drawing and painting, which he did in 2012 after undergoing a major surgery.

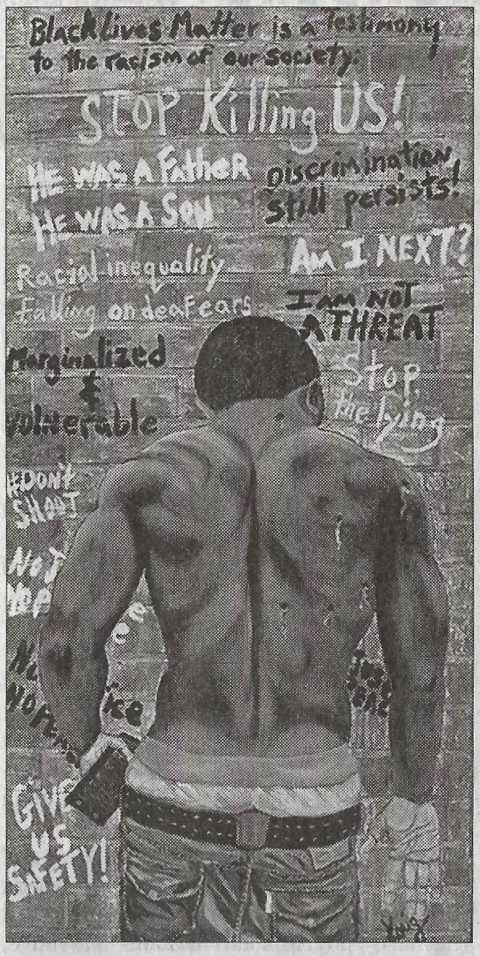

As King wrote: "I see art as a platform to bring issues to life and light. My art conveys realism mixed with surrealism, bringing about what I describe as 'fantasy art.'"

As written in a press release, artists considered the following when assembling the exhibition: "It has truly been an unusual year and as the world moves forward through the pandemic and political strife, artists use their art to help with healing and to bring hope and joy, not just to themselves, but also to the people who view and share their art."
